Objectives

Create objectives for intended outcomes of activities being undertaken to achieve goals. When creating an Objective you should:

- tie the Objective to any relevant Strategic Goals, Planning Unit Goals, or Annual Priorities
- complete the Intended results and
- complete the Assessment Measures

In creating your Objectives, think about the overarching goals of your department and ways in which you wish to improve your operations in the coming year. Objectives should not be standard operating procedures that your department will carry out regardless of new planning or goals. Keep in mind that the planning process and creating unit plans and objectives is part of continuous improvement for your department and COM. Not completely meeting your objective within the planning cycle is not a failure, it is an opportunity to reassess and adjust your approach appropriately.

Objectives should be SMART:

- Specific
- Measurable
- Actionable
- Realistic
- Timebound

Create Intended Results – these are the criteria for success of your Objective. Think about what results you expect to see from the Objective and associated Tasks. Different Intended Results should be added individually, not all combined into one.

Create Assessment Measures – how you will measurably know if you achieved the results intended. What data will you use to show your outcomes and how will you collect that data?

Review the Objective. Once you are satisfied with your objective and ready to submit it for approval. At the top of the Objective Details page the Approval status should say DRAFT.

The top screenshot shows a list view titled "Status Reports" with a message "There are no records to display" and buttons for "Add" and "Edit". A red arrow points to the "Add" button. The bottom screenshot shows a detailed form for creating a new status report. It includes fields for "Date" (10/17/2016) and "Planning Year" (2016-2017 - (Current)). A large text area for "Description" contains a yellow callout bubble that says "Enter text here". At the bottom right of the form, there is another yellow callout bubble that says "Save when done". Below the form are "Save" and "Close" buttons.
